My goodness, June already. It doesn't feel like it this past week, but we are close. I am sure the weather will improve and I'm guessing, before long we will probably be complaining about the heat. We are getting closer to sending our youth off to the National Youth Gathering in New Orleans and fund-raising efforts are continuing, a big thank you to those who have helped and those who will be helping in the future. I can't think of much more at the moment, so I am going to dive right into our commandment of the month. This month it is the first of the neighbor commandments, start of the second tablet of the law.

Honor your father and your mother. Sounds pretty simple doesn't it? Short and sweet. Before we get too far into it, I would like to share with you what Luther says in his introduction to the fourth commandment in the large catechism.

"Thus far we have learned the first three commandments, which relate to God. First, that with our whole heart we trust in Him, and fear and love Him throughout all our life. Secondly, that we do not misuse His holy name in the support of falsehood or any bad work, but employ it to the praise of God and the profit and salvation of our neighbor and ourselves. Thirdly, that on holidays and when at rest we diligently treat and urge God's Word, so that all our actions and our entire life be ordered according to it. Now follow the other seven, which relate to our neighbor, among which the first and greatest is:

"Thou shalt honor thy father and thy mother."

He continues with this: "For it is a much higher thing to honor than to love. Honor includes not only love, but also deference, humility, and modesty directed (so to speak) toward a majesty concealed within them." He also states that next to God, we give them the highest place. The first thing that comes to mind when I read this is, Wow! That is quite a command. As I look back on my childhood and into my early adulthood, I probably was not a shining example as a keeper of this commandment. No wonder Dr. Luther stress that this should be taught from a young age so that young people revere their parents as God's representatives. He then adds that however "lowly, poor, feeble, and eccentric they may be, they are still their mother and father, given by God."

Now I think that we would all agree that this is indeed a challenging commandment. One of the interesting things about this commandment is that it is the only commandment that carries a promise: "that it may go well with you and you may live long in the land." Luther looks at this as both a temporal (here and now) and spiritual blessings, with emphasis on both family and civil stability that are vital to both individuals and societies.

As Lutherans we expand upon the scope of the commandment significantly, placing within it a theological and social vision for the proper ordering of our human relationships and authority. As we teach that the definition of father and mother is expanded to any of those having authority over us or those place over us by our parents. For example teachers, granted that position to educate and help you grow. We then take it even further to include the civil authorities who create laws and regulations, and then govern and enforce those laws for a peaceful and ordered society.

Honor Your Father and Your Mother

The 4th Commandment

As Lutherans we expand upon the scope of the commandment significantly, placing within it a theological and social vision for the proper ordering of our human relationships and authority. As we teach that the definition of father and mother is expanded to any of those having authority over us or those place over us by our parents. For example teachers, granted that position to educate and help you grow. We then take it even further to include the civil authorities who create laws and regulations, and then govern and enforce those laws for a peaceful and ordered society.

The Fourth Commandment is frequently invoked in discussions on elder care, healthcare ethics, and end-of-life decision-making. Luther's injunction to support and care for one's parents takes on renewed relevance as families and societies grapple with the challenges of dementia, palliative care, and the dignity of the elderly. Lutheran ethics stress the imperative of compassionate presence and structural support for older adults.

While Luther was very focused on the child's duty, in more modern times the emphasis has moved toward more mutual responsibility within relationships of authority. Today, the right to honor presupposes a corresponding responsibility to act justly. In the contemporary world, in situations involving abuse, neglect, or coercion, obedience is neither required nor ethically appropriate. This reflects an increased sensitivity to psychological health, trauma, and the theological imperative for justice.

The challenges with some of the more contemporary issues that impact our world come into play in this commandment as well. As the world looks to change Biblical definitions and God's design, the question arises in the understanding of father and mother. Is it the same in a world of Father and Father, Mother and Mother, or even They and They? We have to be careful, God created the order of man and woman, husband and wife, mother and father. Each parent plays a vital part in the raising of a child. So many today never experience that with single parent families, divided families, LGBTQ+ families. Many outside of our church body feel the commandment lacks the inclusivity and diversity required in today's world. I have neither the time nor the space to argue that point here. Please know that I am open to discuss this and any issue that may be raised in your mind by any of my writings or messages. My door is always open.

So I close with this, the fourth commandment, serves as both a theological and ethical foundation for human relationships grounded in respect, responsibility, and divinely ordained order.

And now; The Lord Bless you and keep you, the Lord make His face shine upon you and be gracious to you, the Lord look upon you with favor and give you peace. Pastor Rick Happy birthday to Evelyn. She turned one on May 6th. Some of our babies are growing into toddlers, learning to stand and walk, while the infants are beginning to scoot and crawl. TODDLER TIDBITS: Happy May!

May has been all about Earth Week (we turned it into Earth month). In June, we will be spending a lot more time outside, going on nature walks, water play, and walking to the nearby playground. We are sure to put plenty of sunscreen on the kids, but if you have a hat you'd like to send in for them, please do! We have noticed some sun burns on scalps. We are also in the process of decorating our room. The kids are working hard on these projects, and they are excited to show you the things we've made throughout the month. We will be focused on learning about weather and seasons. We welcomed a new friend to our classroom named Ivanna. We are so excited to have her as part of our LFOJ family! Lastly, if you could make sure the extra clothing in your child's bin is summer clothing, that would be great! -Ms. Jane and Ms. Jordan/Desiree

Mysterious Ways: The Music Box by Barbara Womer

My sister’s gift to me meant more than she knew...

The music box was a lovely gift from my sister, Sue. Made of wood, sculpted and painted to look like a small country church, complete with stained glass windows and a little golden church bell tucked inside the steeple. It reminded me of the house of worship in our small town, the one that stood at the center of my father’s life before he passed away. It had been three years since he died, but Sue must have known I was still missing him. I turned the key and cried upon hearing the first three, heartfelt notes. “Amazing Grace,” Dad’s favorite song.

Ask anyone in town what they remember most about my dad, and they’ll tell you in a flash. “Every Sunday he rang the steeple bell, inviting all of us into church,” they’ll say. And then they’ll mention “Amazing Grace.” Dad led the song selection on Sundays, and I can’t remember a time he didn’t include it.

Dad had a deep, sonorous voice, and it soared above all others when he sang, “and saved a wretch like me...” Even after the service he’d still hum the tune while he tidied up the sanctuary or mowed the church lawn.

I’d been thinking a lot about Dad lately. When I passed the church, heard the peal of its bells or, during Sunday service, heard the opening notes to his song, I would get emotional all over again. Dad had always been there for me. When I was a child, he soothed my little-girl fear of the dark; later, he paid for my years in nursing school. I wished he could still be with my sister and me now.

That’s why I was touched when the deliveryman knocked on the door, bearing Sue’s gift. The last notes of "Amazing Grace" trickled out, and I immediately called my sister to thank her. “You don’t know how much I needed this,” I said.

“I got a feeling that a music box would cheer you up,” Sue said. “I called a shop to ask if they had any shaped like churches, and told the shopkeeper to send the one he liked best.”

“You mean you never saw it? You don’t know the song it plays?” I asked.

“No,” she answered. “What does it play?”

I told her. Now it was Sue’s turn to cry.

Inspired by a Squirrel by Genevieve Ann Wakely from Griswold, Connecticut

After my divorce, finances became a constant worry. I was hopeful when I got a part-time job at a library, and relieved when I got a second part-time job at a homemaker agency. But am I going to be able to handle it all? I thought, gazing out the window one morning. It was a lot for me to take on.

My gaze landed on the maple tree outside. A fluffy squirrel was making his way down the trunk. It wasn't easy—the squirrel was carrying a bread bun. The bun was twice the size of the squirrel's head. How's he going to manage that? I thought. Obviously, he couldn't slip up and down easily like the other squirrels with that bun in his mouth. I couldn't help but root for him.

The squirrel shimmied down, carefully clinging to the bark of the tree. I held my breath. Careful, I thought, mentally cheering him on. One step at a time, little guy. When he finally reached the ground, he pulled the bun behind him. It's not over yet, but you can do it! I thought, laughing. Obviously, this squirrel and I had a lot in common. I had my own giant dinner roll to carry and my own trees to climb. I moved from one window to another to follow the squirrel's progress. Slowly but surely, he made it to the road and stopped to check for cars. Keep going, I thought. You're almost there!

A Prayer for Fathers

Heavenly Father,
you entrusted your Son Jesus,
the child of Mary,
to the care of Joseph, an earthly father.
Bless all fathers
as they care for their families.
Give them strength and wisdom,
tenderness and patience;
support them in the work they have to do,
protecting those who look to them,
as we look to you for love and salvation,
through Jesus Christ our rock and defender.

Amen.

Father's Day.

So I got him a shovel.

My dear brothers and sisters, take note of this: Everyone should be quick to hear, slow to speak...—JAMES 1:19 (NIV)

When I was a new nurse practitioner in the VA Mental Health Clinic, my patient Barnes sat with his head in his hands. Finally, as he stood to leave, he gazed at the wall where all of my diplomas and certificates were hanging. “You know what would be neat?” he said. “If people would put something pretty on their walls, like an old-fashioned quilt.” Then he fixed his eyes on the tile floor and muttered, “Well, I guess that was pretty silly. I don’t know what possessed me to come up with such an idea.”

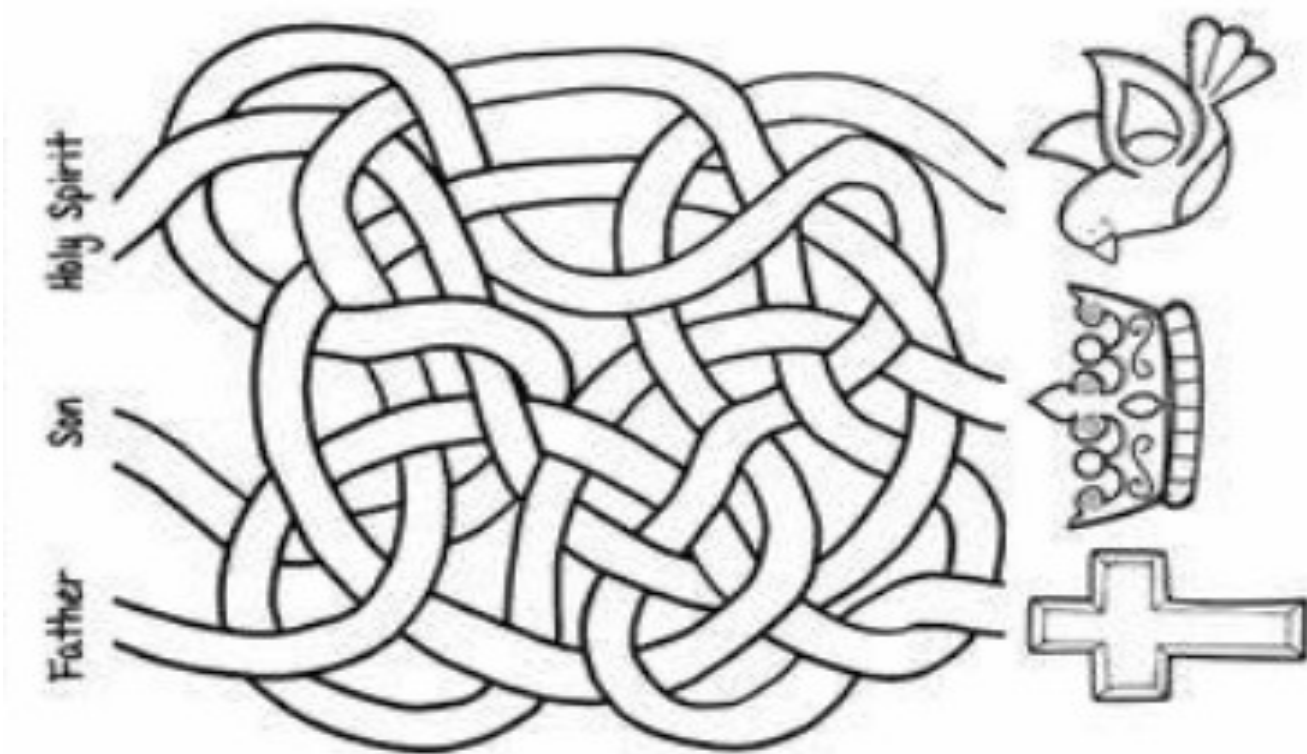

I didn’t either, but after Barnes left, I couldn’t get his suggestion out of my mind. Just about everyone has a quilt memory, I thought. Wonder if it might really help my patients open up?

In the log cabin I called home, I had the perfect quilt in mind. It was an antique Grandmother’s Flower Garden design in a palette of pink and green that my very own Mawmaw had hand-stitched. The next morning, I took down all of the so-called symbols of my success, pulled out the nails, and hung my grandmother’s quilt.

It was amazing. Veterans stared at the long-ago stitches, and in a few moments, they were transported to another world. The sights, sounds, and smells that quilt evoked prompted the telling of all sorts of tales. And as I listened, I discovered: There wasn’t a person alive I couldn’t bond with if I only knew their sto-

A taxi passenger tapped the driver on the shoulder to ask him a question. The driver screamed, lost control of the car, nearly hit a bus, went up on the footpath, and stopped inches from a shop window. For a second, everything was quiet in the cab. Then the driver said, "Look, mate, don't ever do that again. You scared the living daylights out of me!" The passenger apologized and said, "I didn't realize that a little tap would scare you so much." The driver replied, "Sorry, it's not really your fault. Today is my first day as a cab driver — I've been driving a funeral van for the last 25 years."
